When CO is detected and an alarm is activated, an employee, guest or child may think that it's a false alarm, and attempt to remove and disable the detector, because, unlike smoke or fire, CO cannot be smelled or seen.

To deter this type of unwanted removal, the CO detector should be properly secured with a Phillips screw through the detector body into the mounting plate.